Instructions:

- Check the accuracy of each printout by lining up a ruler to the inch marks on each sheet. The inch marks should line up with the ruler. If they do not line up, make sure the page scaling is set to "none" in the Adobe PDF print window and reprint.
- Using the circle guide marks, line up the two sheets of paper by holding the paper up to the light, this sheet goes on the bottom
- Tape both sheets together.
- Make sure that the guide marks stay aligned.
- Place the template on a hard floor surface (not carpet).
- Place your heel on the marked curved line. From a standing position, looking down at your heel, it should be even with the line, not on top of the line.
- Take note of where your longest toe falls.
- Take your foot measurement 3 times to ensure an accurate reading.
- Read the "Suggestions for finding your size" completely.

Suggestions for finding your size:

- Follow the instructions for using this template.
- Use common sense. If you normally wear a size 8 and the template shows you are a 7, then this template is not working for you.
- Khussa are designed to be worn with your toes all the way to the end of the shoe. If you like extra room, size up (add an insole if needed).
- If you have wide feet, you should size up one size (add an insole if needed).
- If your longest toe is slightly above or below the whole sizing line, use the closest whole size line as your Beachcombers khussa size.
- If your longest toe is close to a half size mark or slightly above the half size mark, size up to the next whole size and add a insole.

Breaking-in Beachcombers Khussa Indian Shoes

Beachcombers khussa shoes are hand-made in Pakistan by artisans using premium quality leather. There are likely stencil or hand-marks on the shoes, but normally, these cannot be seen when worn.

Your khussa will be stiff and hard when new but, don't worry, they will mold and conform to the exact shape of your feet becoming soft and comfortable upon breaking them in. The more you wear them the more comfortable they become.

You create a custom right and left shoe when you break them in.

The pictures to the right show a new Beachcombers khussa shoe with a khussa shoe that has been worn a few times. These shoes are the same size. Notice that the new khussa are narrow and stiff, but the worn khussa are wider, soft and have conformed to the shape of the wearer's foot.

Break-In Instructions for Beachcombers Khussa:

Wet your feet and wear your khussa around the house for an afternoon. Occasionally rewet your feet. If they pinch or rub anywhere, put on a band-aid with a cotton ball under it to help stretch the leather in that spot (for example: on the back of the heel or on your big toe). Every time you wear your khussa they will become more comfortable as they mold to the shape of your feet.

If your shoes are tight, take care to properly break them in. You will be surprised at how much they can stretch to conform to your feet. Typically, as long as your toes don't curl, they will break in to be a good fit. If you have broken in your khussa shoes, but they are still a touch tight, try wearing damp socks with your khussa for an afternoon to further stretch them.

If your shoes are too big, simply add foam insoles. You can add full insoles or just toe or heel inserts. Don't worry they won't over-stretch. They only stretch as much as your feet force them.

Tips & Care

- Do not wear Indian shoes in wet conditions. Water on the outside of the shoe will ruin the silk and the leather soles.
- To clean, use a damp cloth. A toothpick can be used to remove dirt from the beading or sequins.
- To protect your sole stitches long term, you can place non-slip sole protectors over the actual stitching. The stitching is exposed, so it WILL wear away.
- Eventually the sole saver at the heel will wear away. Replace with a sticker-style sole saver when it's gone.
- The white silk shoes can be dyed/tinted to any color you like.
